INTRODUCTION

This updated resource guide was prepared by the CDC National AIDS Clearinghouse in cooperation with the National Native American AIDS Prevention Center as a guide to HIV/AIDS services and information sources for Native Americans and those working with the Native American community. The second edition includes the most up-to-date information from the Clearinghouse's Resources and Services, Educational Materials, and Periodicals databases on a variety of HIV/AIDS-related topics.

The Guide includes lists of:

- ◆ HIV/AIDS-related organizations in the United States and Canada that serve Native Americans. The majority of these organizations provide direct services within a community, such as counseling and testing, case management, and community education. A smaller group serves a national or an international audience, working to raise awareness about Native Americans and HIV/AIDS.
- ◆ Clinics/Health centers operating under Indian Health Service Contract 638.
- ◆ Indian Health Service offices
- ◆ Urban Indian Health Program Branch Coordinators.
- ◆ A bibliography consisting predominantly of basic AIDS materials targeting Native Americans.
- ◆ Newsletters, journals, and other periodicals about HIV/AIDS that focus on the Native American population.
- ◆ Internet sites that provide information targeting Native Americans and/or provide general health and AIDS-related information.

We hope that you find Native Americans and HIV/AIDS: A Guide to Selected Resources helpful. You may also be interested in ordering HIV/AIDS and Native Americans and Alaska Natives, a bibliography of educational materials in the Clearinghouse's Standard Search Series. It contains detailed information, drawn from the Educational Materials Database, of a wide range of additional HIV/AIDS-related materials targeting Native Americans, most of which are not listed in this Guide. Call 1-800-458-5231 to order.

Clearinghouse staff members add new entries and update the information in the databases on a regular basis. To obtain the most current information, to order a free Clearinghouse catalog of publications, or to ask specific questions about HIV/AIDS and Native Americans, please contact the CDC NAC Reference Service:

ORGANIZATIONS

This section includes information about organizations in the United States and Canada that provide HIV/AIDS services for, or by, Native Americans. It is divided into six subsections.

- ▶ Regional and Local Organizations lists private organizations, most of which provide direct services, such as counseling and testing, case management, and community education
- ▶ National Organizations lists organizations which advocate on behalf of Native Americans' health issues in general, or about HIV/AIDS specifically
- ▶ Canadian Organizations
- ▶ Indian Health Service Contract Organizations describes community clinics and hospitals that receive funding through Indian Health Service Contract 638
- ▶ Indian Health Service Offices
- ▶ Urban Indian Health Program Branch Coordinators

All of these organizations were selected from the CDC National AIDS Clearinghouse Resources and Services Database. To ensure that the information included is current, organizations were contacted prior to publication to verify information. However, changes in information, especially addresses and telephone numbers, occur frequently. Call 1-800-458-5231 and ask for a search of the Resources and Services Database to get the most current information.
